Politics.

Since the surrender of the armies of the late Confederate States Government, a large number of the more prominent Southerners have been devoting their time and talents to Politics, when, in the opinion of the writer, they should have been engaged in a more laudable and profitable work.

As the New Orleans Times truly says, the South has had her share long enough in political dissensions; and there never was a period when their discussion was more unprofitable than now. We are like a set of men standing a long way off from a field of battle. We are near neither the combatants nor the danger; and yet we fume and fret, and fire off our guns, and brandish our swords, without the possibility of hurting any one, or of defending ourselves.

What matters it to the South, in the present aspect of affairs, what is done by the mere politicians of the North? Do we not know that the whole controversy is for mere political power.

We are out of the ring. We are neither to be favored with office or patronage. If we get a member or two in Congress, it will be more than we expect. Then why should we be thrusting ourselves forward and uttering bitter things, the tendency of which is only to encourage attacks upon the South and to invite recrimination? The result of the war has been to change our relations politically and industrially. As we cannot retrieve the former, let us restore the last. We may effect much by closing our eyes to all things except the developing of our resources, and the reclaiming our lost ground in art, manufactures and self-dependence. How much more advantageously will those be employed who, instead of spending their time in watching the weather-cock of political changes beyond Mason and Dixon's line, shall look at home, and devote themselves to the consideration of how they can best improve it—what they can make without buying—or how much less they can now live on than they did before. We invite attention to this system. We are satisfied it will pay.

Some genius, whose forte is evidently mathematics, propounds the following problem: If four dogs, with sixteen legs, can catch twenty-nine rabbits, with eighty-seven legs, in forty-four minutes, how many legs must the same rabbits have to get away from eight dogs, with thirty-two legs, in 17 1/2 minutes?

"Do you like novels?" asked Miss Fitzgerald of her country lover.
"I can't say," he replied, "I never ate any; but I'm death on possum!"

Rather Trust Ex-Rebels than Government Robbers and Contractors.

Gen. Isaac J. Wistar, of Philadelphia, wrote a letter in response to an invitation to be present at the Cleveland Convention of Soldiers and sailors, in which he said:

The present attempt of certain Northern politicians to commit similar rebellious acts, by keeping our Union in a condition of hazard and danger, and compelling one portion of our countrymen to submit without voice or representation, to the government of another—furnishes another opportunity for all loyal Union soldiers to rally for the preservation of the same Union for which we fought as comrades during four long and eventful years.

I wish to be considered as enlisted in the same cause for this war also, and willing to march under the same flag, shoulder to shoulder, with any and all who are willing to strike another blow for peace and Union, veteran soldiers or new recruits.

I would even trust a repentant rebel soldier who fought us on a fair field, but is loyally disposed now, rather than the politicians and contractors who stayed at home and robbed us and the Government throughout the war, and now have the impudence to ask us to share the Government we have preserved with negroes, in order that they may continue to grow fat on their verbal patriotism.

Josh Dillings says: "There is only one advantage that I can see in going to the devil; and that is, the road is easy, and you are sure to get there."
